This means that if you do not send a message to another ProtonMail user, in which case it is always encrypted. Download Pro: Although Zoho Mail has a free email service, Zoho as a whole is like an online set of several applications that are centered around business use. The first thing you may notice about Zoho Mail when composing a message is how minimal the design is, which can be a great thing. When you create a new message, you can quickly switch between the new message and the rest of your mail through the small tabs at the top of the page. Streams is a feature in Zoho Mail that makes it easy to create groups where you and your team members can work with shared messages and attachments. It works a bit like a private social media site. Zoho Mail has these features, too: All standard compute tools are included in Zoho Mail, but you can also add images from Zoho Docs, Google Drive, OneDrive, Box, and other services, as well as include tables in your messages. Custom domains can be added to the whitelist or block lists. All Zoho Mail addresses end as @zohomail.com. Instead of getting stuck with one like @outlook.com or @gmail.com, you can choose from a huge list. Email domains are divided into sections, so it's easy to find one that relates to certain jobs, hobbies, technologies, and music. There are also American, world and spiritual areas. The best choices are mail.com, email.com, usa.com, myself.com, post.com, dr.com techie.com, engineer.com, cheerful.com and writeme.com. After you create an email account, you can create up to 10 alias addresses that work with your primary address. Extreme flexibility in choosing Mail.com custom domain name for your email address is what makes it one of the best email services, but that's probably the only advantage. There really is nothing else to be excited about when it comes to Mail.com your email account.... Download Pro: Tutanota (Latin for tuta note, which means safe message) is similar to ProtonMail above in that it automatically encrypts all your emails. However, if you want, you can disable end-to-end encryption. One of the first things that stands out with this email service is that you can't continue creating an account until you make a really secure password. Some places will urge you to strengthen your password but still accept it; Tutanota demands it. The web interface is really easy to use and provides nice menu transitions that really combine mail folders and email settings. When you send messages to non-Tutanota users, you can password protect them or keep them unencrypted. If a password is selected, the recipient receives a custom link to open the message, where they must enter a read and reply password. Perhaps the nicest feature is that when a Tutanota user responds back to a user who is not using Tutanota, the messages are still contained in the temporary account. This means that you can have back and forth communication with another email service and can leave the link open at all times. Although it is not as well known as Gmail, Yahoo, etc., Tutanota still supports the following: You can create an account with any of these domains: tutanota.com, tutanota.de, tutanotmail.com, tuta.io, keemail.me. Download Pro: iCloud Mail is an interesting email service because many people don't even realize they are just steps away from having it. For this reason, iCloud Mail is one of the better email providers: for most people, they can be set up in seconds. However, iCloud Mail is only accessible to people with Apple devices, so while many people have an iPad, iPhone, Mac etc. not everyone does, so unlike other services in this list it's very restrictive. After you create an iCloud account, you can sign in from your computer and access a set of products in addition to mail, such as notes, reminders, photos, iCloud Drive content, contacts, calendar events, and anything else that's been synced to iCloud from your iOS device. The iCloud Mail part of iCloud is not super advanced and probably won't serve you well if you want a lot of options in your email. However, it's very easy to set up for Apple device users without having to go through the often boring process of adding your name, choosing a password, etc. All of this works well with your existing Apple ID. Here are some other features: Access 5GB of free storage for emails and other iCloud files. It can be via IMAP. Supports keyboard shortcuts. All emails sent to your iCloud Mail account can be set up to automatically be sent to a different address. Files as large as 5 GB can be emailed via iCloud Mail via Mail Drop, which basically sends Drive.Je link to files stored on your iCloud and easy to unsubscribe from emails with just one or two clicks. iCloud Mail accounts end at @icloud.com. Then you can sign in to iCloud on your computer using your Apple ID and then open Mail to access iCloud Mail. 10 Minute Mail is by far one of the best email services if you need an email address right now, temporarily, and without having to go through all the typical user registration steps. Just as the name suggests, 10 Minute Mail is not really a full-fledged email provider because it only gives you an account of 10 minutes. We added it here as it is absolutely perfect for those times when you need a temporary email account. Instead of providing the primary email you use for everything else, connect a one-time address from 10 Minute Mail. You'll have emails as well as a regular email account, but it's not tied to your identity at all, and when the time is up, you don't have to worry about closing your account, deleting emails or anything – just close the page or let the time expire. 10 Minute Mail is perfect for those times when you're just testing out the service and don't want to get emails in your regular Inbox. It's also useful if you share your email address with someone you don't trust. It's a valid email account that you can get verification emails to and can reply from, but it disappears after 10 minutes. Of course, you can use 10 Minute Mail for more than 10 minutes if you need to, but you will need to use the button on the email page to restore the clock before 10 minutes is up. Up.
